My name is David Georgeanni. I am called to serve Christ and His Church as a priest with the Diocese of Trenton. This is my story.

In the Beginning

I grew up in a devout family. My parents made sure I went to religious education and Mass every Sunday. They also encouraged a prayerful and morally upstanding life. Growing up, my faith remained important to me, but I was driven by ambition. I was very successful in school and I had my whole life planned out. I wanted to make lots of money and have a family. God began to show me that my plan was not his during high school. I participated in an elite drum corps program which ended up being a bad influence. My Dad noticed my change in behavior and decided to pull me out. In my hurt and confusion over his decision, I turned to alcohol. Soon after, I attended college, and began to find academic success early on. Though I was finding success in my education, I found myself still moving back to drinking, as it was a normal part of the college culture. In turn, my alcoholism gradually worsened. However, no matter how bad things got, I never abandoned God. While I was still struggling with active alcoholism, God led me to the Drexel Newman Catholic Community, in which my faith grew by leaps and bounds.

My Vocation

Despite being successful in classes and growing in my faith, I could not beat alcoholism on my own. I hit rock bottom and sought healing from a rehab program. A priest came to the rehab program and heard my confession, after which he asked me if I had ever considered seminary. I was surprised, and the seed of my vocation was planted.

After college, I was offered a great job in the defense industry, but I needed a higher level security clearance. I was denied the clearance, meaning that my planned career path was impossible. Everything I had worked so hard to achieve came crashing down. Normally, this would have devastated me, but I felt at peace. I trusted that God closed that door for a reason, and I asked Him what he wanted.

Around this time, my diocese had a "called by name" initiative which encouraged people to send in the names of those who may have a calling to the priesthood. I received a letter saying that someone had submitted my name. I called the diocesan vocations office, learned more, and was encouraged to meet with a spiritual director on a regular basis.

The moment I received clarity about my call to the priesthood, I was attending a Star Trek convention, a lifelong dream. In the car driving back to my hotel, I was thanking God for all the blessings of my life and sharing with him as I would with a friend. I had been afraid that my desire to be a priest was just another manifestation of my ambition, that maybe I wanted to do it because I would be good at it and it would be a good “career path for me.”

In a moment of clarity, I realized that wasn’t true and that those doubts were not of God, but were, opposite to what I had believed, the result of pride. That moment of clarity was the culmination of careful discernment and prayer. I knew that this calling was of God and continued to pursue priesthood with my home diocese.

Called to Serve

It is my chief desire to give my life entirely to God to use as He sees fit. I feel God calling me to serve in my home diocese, the Diocese of Trenton. I desire to be a priest to help fight against the secularism that is taking over our world. I desire to journey with people, suffer with them, offer the sacraments, and share with them how to have God be part of their lives. It is through our brokenness that the Lord seeks us. I have been led to my vocation through my brokenness and God’s healing power.

Prayer & Invitation

Please pray for me and for my fellow Labouré classmates as we begin the journey to formation.

Feel free to reach out with any questions you might have at: DavidG@rescuevocations.org.

“There are very few people who realize what God would make of them if they abandoned themselves into his hands, and let themselves be formed by his grace.”

—St. Ignatius of Loyola

I am an aspirant of Labouré

This means that I am a fundraiser for a class of aspiring priests, sisters and brothers. A recent study confirmed that nearly one out of every two aspirants is blocked from entering seminaries and religious communities due to student loan debt. It is the only thing that prevents many from entering formation to become a priest, sister or brother. My classmates are discerning all over the nation.

With your help, we will rebuild the Church!

My goal is to raise $60,000 (the average student loan amount) before June 30th of this year via The Labouré Society, a Catholic non-profit that helps aspirants like me to answer God's call.

Every aspirant is in serious discernment with a diocese or community and is required to work to liquidate his/her assets in order to make his/her own maximum loan payments. Through Labouré, my fellow aspirants and I work together as a class, raising donations which will be divided amongst the class and ultimately applied to our remaining student loans.

We are blessed to have this opportunity to share our love for God, our vocation stories, and to invite hundreds of individuals to support vocations like ours by financially investing in our future and the future of the Church.

Will you join our vocational journeys?

Please partner with us and be part of our vocation team so that we can answer God's call together!
